E. H. PALLARD, Esq.

The Scheme of a Local Bank for this Colony with Branches at the most important places in China, has been in contemplation for a very long period.

The local and foreign trade in Hongkong and at the open ports in China and Japan has increased so rapidly within the last few years that additional Banking facilities are felt to be required.

The Banks now in China being only Branches of Corporations whose head quarters are in England or India, and which were formed chiefly with the view of carrying on exchange operations between those countries and China, are scarcely in a position to deal satisfactory with the local trade which has become so much more extensive and varied than in former years.

This deficiency the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Company will supply, and will in fact assume the same position with relation to this Colony as the Presidency Banks in India, or the Banks of Australia in their respective localities.

The Establishment of a Mint in Hongkong, providing an adequate supply of proper currency, will render a local Banking medium essential to carry out its operations, and the almost certain disappearance of the existing Compradoric system (so far as money is concerned) will also ensure Banks becoming in course of time the exclusive medium for the transaction of the monetary operations connected with trade.

For the anticipated success of this enterprise there are therefore ample grounds; and the great prosperity which has attended the working of other local associations in China clearly shows that the largest profits are obtained by those Public Companies which possess an interested local body of Proprietors or Shareholders whose support naturally forms a chief element of remunerative success.

The Bank will commence operations simultaneously in Hongkong and Shanghai and as the importance of its business at the latter place must be very great, it is intended to establish a local Board of Directors there for more effectually meeting the work. As circumstances render it advisable the Bank will establish Branches at other places.

In the distribution of Shares, Hongkong and Shanghai will equally participate. Shares will also be reserved for the other ports in China and Japan and for persons residing elsewhere, who are directly interested in the China Trade.

Applications for Shares must be addressed until further notice, to the Provisional Committee, care of

IMPARTIAL, NOT NEUTRAL.

SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1864.

A perusal of Sir Macdonald Stephenson's report as to the possibility of introducing railways into China, leaves the mind of the reader very hopefully impressed with the feasibility of the project. He recurs to the insuperable obstacles which it was prophesied he would encounter in introducing railways into India, to the "active discouragement and passive obstructiveness," he encountered from the Directors and the merchants of the Company; to the "prophetic assurances of inevitable failure through floods, "white ants, indisposition of the people to "change their former habits," and many other similar causes; contrasts these prophecies of failure with the rapid extension and complete success of railways in India, and infers that the difficulties and obstacles which appear at present to stand in the way of their introduction into China, will equally melt away and disappear when steadily confronted.

In China, as elsewhere, it will be found that prospective difficulties diminish as they are approached and more accurately gauged; that obstacles assumed at first to be insurmountable, soon yield to the irresistible influence of well-directed perseverance, and that an undertaking which can produce only the most beneficial results upon the whole country, needs only to be pursued in the right way, to secure its certain and early success.

In effect, an analysis of the impression of insuperable obstacles which is apt to arise when contemplating the introduction of railways into China, will shew that the only really grave difficulty to be overcome, is the opposition that must be expected from the native authorities. The thought will arise that we are going almost too fast in expecting a nation which, a few years ago, would not allow a foreigner to enter her ports; which looked on people of every other country as barbarians, and on China as, in itself, the concentration of perfection, to have undergone so thorough a revulsion of ideas as not only to throw open the country as has been done to foreign trade and foreign travellers, to subject her soldiers to foreign discipline as they have been partially subjected; but to admit so astounding an innovation as railways, in place of the old system of canal and boat transport, which has prevailed for so many thousand years. It is too much to expect that the jealous and exclusive mandarins will readily acknowledge that they are so far behind the nations of the west in science, and allow the people whom it is their interest and policy to impress with an idea of their superiority, to perceive that foreigners have discovered a system of which they were ignorant, by which goods and passengers can be transported at a rate far exceeding that at which the swiftest courier can travel. But Sir Macdonald Stephenson says he knows on good authority that Prince Kung's views are favourable to the commencement of railways; and it is to be hoped that, the highest authority holding these views, the influential mandarins of the Empire may be brought gradually to adopt them also. One great objection to the introduction of railways lies in the certainty that thousands of the boating population would find their "occupation gone" directly they were in working order. Sir Macdonald Stephenson thinks, and says, that a meeting of the influential native inhabitants of Canton which he called together agreed with him, that the employment on the railway would more than compensate the boatmen who would be deprived of their occupation. But we cannot concur in this view; we fear that Sir Macdonald's cursory inspection of the country did not enable him to appreciate the enormous proportion of the population which finds a living by boating, and that the readiness of Chinese to assent to what they do not understand, or what they will not take trouble to consider, has confirmed him in what we believe to be an erroneous opinion. It is true that employment would be found for a large number of men during the construction of the railway; but all this while boats would be plying, therefore the men so engaged would be coolies, not boatmen; the vocation of the latter would only cease when the opening of the line afforded another and cheaper means of transit, whereas then, the demand for labour would cease also, or at least become less. China cannot, in this respect, be compared to India, as its communications, by means of water, are already perfect, whereas the latter country had nothing but its rivers, and roads little better than those which the Chinese possess in addition to their canals. In India, the means of communication had to be created; whereas, in China, the question is to supersede those already existing by others which are superior in convenience, but which will not afford employment for a tithe of the numbers who find occupation as carriers at present. Nor is there any prospect that the thousands who must be thus thrown out of work will find employment though a larger demand springing up for produce, when its transport becomes easier; for every available inch of the soil of China is already tilled, to the exclusion even of pasturage. We would not be understood to imply that a vast boating population will be suddenly thrown starving on the charity of their neighbours; for the gradual opening of railways, a few dozen miles at a time, will effect only a gradual supercession of the boating traffic, and enable a portion at least of the boatmen to find other work, before another batch of their brethren find themselves likewise adrift. The branch creeks, moreover, will still be as serviceable as ever, and will probably become even more busy as the greater facilities of intercommunication afforded by the main lines of railway will encourage the interchange of commodities. But still, we think there will remain a large portion of the boating population who, for a long time after the opening of a railway in any district, will be reduced to great distress. The apprehension of this result may not impel the native authorities to oppose the introduction of railways, but we think there is little doubt that they will bring this attendant evil in their train. Thousands will find employment, as policemen, porters, navvies and in other capacities, but for hundreds more there will, at first at least, be no opening.

That the monetary support which Sir Macdonald Stephenson anticipates from the wealthy natives will be accorded, we have no doubt. The precedent afforded by the readiness with which they invest their money in steamers, amply justifies the presumption. And the singular facilities offered by the country for the construction of railways, especially in its richest provinces, leave little room for fear that his anticipations of their cheapness will be falsified when tested by the event. Proposals have, we are led to infer, been already laid before the Chinese government, according to which the latter are to guarantee twelve per cent on the capital employed, securing its due payment upon the customs revenues; and these proposals, Sir Macdonald Stephenson has, he says, reason to believe will be eventually adopted. Whether or not this belief is well founded, we do not profess to offer an opinion; but confine ourselves to expressing a hearty hope that the event may justify it. The temporary inconvenience that will be felt from the non-employment of a number of the present carriers will pass away; following the law of supply and demand which rules in regard to labour as well as produce, in China as well as elsewhere. They will gradually become absorbed into different other occupations, or emigrate if no other opening occur. But of the advantages which must accrue to China generally from the introduction of railways, there can be no doubt; brigandage of the nature at present carried on would become impossible; the demand for produce would increase with the increased facilities and cheapness of transport; foreign goods would find their way more readily into the interior in exchange, and the condition of the people be thus improved. Above all, intercourse between natives and foreigners would be promoted, and the former would become familiarised with the civilisation of the west, and learn to avail themselves of those means which have enabled its inhabitants to attain their present superiority over the other nations of the world.

SUMMARY OF THE WEEK.

DURING the past week the temperature has been considerably lower and we have experienced several days of wet weather. Few events worthy of being recorded have occurred in the settlement since the date of our last issue. On the 26th ultimo an inquiry was held on board the Berwick Wells, Hospital ship, as to the circumstances attending the death of a patient named John Barker, late foreman in Mr. Keele's Horse Bazaar, the official minutes of which will be found in another column. A meeting has also been held by the Committee appointed at the last Land Renters' meeting to consider the best site for a new cemetery. Minutes of the proceedings will be found elsewhere. It will be seen that the site previously determined on, some three miles from the settlements, has been abandoned, we think wisely, as the distance would certainly have proved inconvenient. But we fear difficulty will be found in selecting another convenient locality. The Kingling Consular Court has been singularly free from business since the conclusion of the Tong Fat case; at least, no notice has been published of any trials. In the American Court the owners of the Catalpa have been adjudged to pay 22 per cent on the value of the vessel and cargo, as salvage, to the Martin White, which towed her off the North bank. A case in which the owners of the schooner Moosmie sued the owners of the Fire Dart for the value of the former vessel, which was sunk in a collision with the steamer, has been decided in favour of the latter. It was asserted on behalf of the Moosmie that she was out of the fairway at the time of the collision, which was denied. It was also asserted that she had a light in the fore-rigging, which was denied. And it was shewn on behalf of the Fire Dart that the night was so dark, it was impossible to distinguish any object more than a short distance ahead.

An Imperial Edict has been issued, to the effect that claimants of property in districts lately occupied by the rebels, will not be reinstated in their former possessions, except after having proved the validity of their claims. It is announced that H. E. Kuan Wên, Governor-general of the two Hu, is dead, and that Li Futai may possibly take his place.

On the 28th ultimo the city of He-chow was evacuated by the rebels and fell into the hands of the besiegers. The garrison escaped into Kiang-si province through a pass in the The Dea hills.

Our latest advices from JAPAN were received on the 31st ultimo, per steamer Ganges from Yokohama. The delay in the commencement of active operations announced by the letters received per Cormorant, some days previously, has, we are happy to say, come to an end. The Tycoon is said to have definitively refused to ratify the convention made by the Japanese Ambassadors with the French Government to open the Straits within three months. Accordingly, a combined force of English, French and Dutch vessels, numbering sixteen in all, were under orders to leave on the 29th ultimo for Simonasaki, the American flag being also taken into action by the steamer Takiang. The design, as at present announced, is to silence the forts at each side of the Strait and then land men to take the guns. It is currently reported that the Tycoon and Choshiu are acting together, and not taking opposite sides as was before imagined. Trade at all the open ports is excessively dull; large quantities of silk are said to be lying idle in Yeddo, but none has reached the foreign market.

By the French mail steamer, advices have reached us from England to the 16th July, but two days later telegraphic news was received by the last mail, so the papers contain little worthy of notice. The announcement that Denmark contemplated entering the Germanic confederation, was received by the last mail. It was also stated that Grant had been quiescent since his defeat on the 22nd June; the Confederates were believed to be moving in the direction of the rear of his left. Sherman's position is said to be very critical, as the Confederate force in his rear is augmenting. A detachment of Grant's army, under Wilson, was intercepted and lost 13 guns and 1,000 prisoners. The resignation of Mr. Chase and the succession of Mr. Fessenden to his appointment, which was also mentioned in telegrams brought by the last mail, is confirmed. This change, and the abolition of the gold bill, caused gold to fall from 282 to 230.

PEKING GAZETTE.

(August 2nd, 1864.)

This day the report of Kuan Wên and Tsêng Kuo-fan as to the recapture of Nanking and the destruction of the Rebel leaders, was received by courier travelling six hundred li a day under a red flag. It informed US of the total extinction of the insurgents, of the capture alive of Li Hsiu-chên (the Chung Wang) and Hung Jên-ta.

Such is an abstract of the report.

When the tidings were received WE, in common with the officials and people all over the country, were highly gratified. The long-haired rebel Hung Hsiu-tsuan had, ever since the thirtieth year of Tao-kuang, continually stirred up confusion. Coming from Kiang-hsi through the two Hu and the three Kiang, he sent off detachments towards Chih-li and Shan-tung, thus almost filling the Empire with his myrmidons. Then again, in the third year of Hsien Fêng, he captured Nanking, and wrongfully assumed the name and style of an Emperor, thus plunging the people of the South-eastern provinces into troubles and difficulties in which WE deeply sympathised, although WE could not adequately express that commiseration. The cup of crime and wickedness at length filled up, and gods and men were alike enraged. OUR Imperial Father the late Emperor whose temple style is Wên Tsung-hsien, was made as thunder (lit.), and with the utmost severity carried on the work of extermination. He appointed Kuan Wên, the Governor-General of the two Hu, as Imperial Commissioner, to act in conjunction with Hu Ling-yi, Lord of Hupeh, to superintend the re-conquest of the districts in the neighbourhood. Hu Ling-yi took up his position in the departments of Su and Sung for the purpose of clearing away the Rebels in the Eastern provinces. Tsêng Kuo-fan was appointed Governor-General of the two Kiang, and Imperial Commissioner for the extinction of the Rebellion in Kiang-su and Kiang-hsi. Thus there was no confusion in the steps taken, and day by day the design set before each progressed. In the seventh month of the eleventh year (of Hsien Fêng) OUR Imperial Father ascended on the dragon, at which time one half of Kiang-su and Chi-kiang had fallen into the hands of the Insurgents. On His death-bed he expressed his deep regret that he had not completed the extinction of the rebellion. WE, thus left at a tender age, were compelled to assume the onerous duties of the Throne, and carry out the designs of OUR August Father. WE begged the assistance and guidance of the two Empresses Dowager, who recommended the appointment of Tsêng Kuo-fan to the office of Vice Prime Minister, and Military governor of four provinces, with sole power of organising a force. This high official has, ever since his appointment, fulfilled the duties imposed on him. His only idea seems to have been to force his way and exterminate the rebels. He ordered Pêng Yu-ling, Yang Yo-ping and Tsêng Kuo-tsuch to act in concert on land and water. Day by day the cities on the banks of the Long River gave in their allegiance, until more than one hundred were restored to OUR sway. Between one and two hundred thousand rebels met their fate in the field, and at length the investment of Nanking was completed, and all means of supply cut off. On the 16th day of the sixth month of this year (July 19th) Tsêng Kuo-tsuch leading a vast numbers of military officers and soldiers, made a successful attack on the outer city, and killed an incalculable number of the enemy. The Rebel chief Hung Hsiu-tsuan with his most desperate followers were, however, said to have determined to hold out within the inner wall.

So much for Tseng Kuo-fan's first report. WE received a second despatch announcing the capture of the city which (by the Rebels) was falsely called "Heaven-preserved." The Rebels who had made a stand within its walls were in truth excessively determined, but on the 30th day of the fifth month (July 3rd) Li Chiang-ho with others, taking a body of soldiers, seized The Dragon's Neck hill, and thus on the next and following days all the forces were enabled, by taking turns, to keep up a constant attack. Li Chên-tien and Wu Tsung-kuo with others commenced to mine even under the guns of the wall, where the fire was the hottest. Hsiao Fu-szu, &c. raised a battery close to the wall and most courageously carried on the attack. On the 16th day of the month (July 19th), very early in the morning, Tsêng Kuo-tsuch ordered a simultaneous attack on all sides, exploded the mines, and blew up more than two hundred feet of the wall. Li Chên-ien, Wu Ming-liang and others outstripping their soldiers, made for the breach, while the soldiers themselves, racing on, flung themselves in a body into the opening. The rebels who still held the wall to the left of the breach flung down enormous grenades on our men, destroying very many of them, and for a moment checking them. Pêng Fu-chih, Hsiao Pên-szu and others, with their own hands cut down some few of the fellows who were retreating, and thus not a single man succeeded in forcing his way to the rear. Meanwhile Wu Ming-liang, &c. led their troops to the Kuang-ling hill, and attacked the Rebel position on the right of the Tai-ping gate, and thus the garrison was driven back. Li Chiang-hou and others at the same time attacked the suburb outside the Tai-ping gate, and effected an entrance in that direction, while Wang Yuan-ho and his men assaulted the wall to the north of the palace occupied by the soi disant Heavenly Prince. Liu Lien-chieh led a body of men to the Shên-tsui (North East) gate, and by ladders scaled the wall at that place, all his soldiers rushing in simultaneously, fighting up to the Lion hill. The Yi fên (North) and Chao (East) gates were at the same time taken. Meanwhile Lo Fên-yuan got in through an old mine on the West side of the Yu pa (South) gate and thus found his way to the top of the wall. Li Ching-hou and others having established themselves in the suburbs of the Tung chi (Little East) gate, scaled the wall in that place, while Chên Shi and his troops made a furious attack on the Han Hsi and Shui Hsi (West) gates. Li Hsiu-chên, the soi disant Chung wang, at the head of a rabble of desperadoes, thought to escape by the Han-hsi gate, but was opposed by the steady resistance offered by Chên Shi and his force. The rabble above mentioned were driven back, and were fain to take refuge on the Tsing Liang hill. Huang Yi-shên, a rebel commander, attacked the Chung Kuan and Nan Kiang Chi, and had a heavy fight with the rebels on the bank of the river. In conjunction with Chên Shi and Yi Liang-lin he also attacked the Han-hsi and Shui-hsi gates. Thus was the entire number of gates taken. About one or two o'clock next morning the palace of the soi disant Heavenly Prince as well as the residences of many other fellows who called themselves Princes, were burned, and the smoke which rose from them filled the heavens. The Rebel Hung and other atrocious wretches to the number of more than one thousand issued from the palace by the Southern gate, and took refuge in the houses which surrounded it. Yuan Tai-chên with others searched them out, and killed more than seven hundred of them, taking also two ahs seals and one gold seal which Hung Hsiu-tsuan had been in the habit of using. At three or four o'clock on the same morning (July 26th) a band of about one thousand rebels, having assumed the dress worn by the Imperial soldiers, advanced by the breach near the Tai-ping gate, but were stopped by the men in the Kuan-szu and Hsiang-hsi camps. Tsêng Kuo-fan ordered a squadron of cavalry to throw itself into the Shih hsu-chên (a suburb of the South gate) where the soi disant Zealous King, by name Li Wan-tsai, was taken. The fugitives were chased to Hu-shu (a city about twenty miles to the south of Nanking), and completely exterminated. Tsêng Kuo-tsuch questioned Li Wan-tsai, and elicited from him, that after the seizure of the city, the soi disant Chü Wang (Chung Wang's brother), the minor Western and Southern Kings, and the Ting, Tsung and Chu Wangs had fled by night, but had been taken by the Imperial forces and executed in company with many other interior chiefs. Others who were examined stated that that head rebel Hung-hsiu-tsuan, had during the fifth moon of this year committed suicide by poison, and that his grave was within the so-called palace. The young lord, Hung Fu-tien, had, they said, assumed his father's titles, but as soon as the city was carried he had ordered a funeral pile to be built, upon which he had burned himself. That criminal Li Hsiu-chên, having been wounded during the assault upon the city, took refuge in a private house on one of the hills, where he was ferreted out by Hsiao Fu-szu, and captured. In the same place Hung Jên-ta, he second brother of the soi disant Tien Wang, was also seized. Thus were those old Rebels who had come from the two Kiang and the two Hu completely exterminated by the Imperial troops during the 17th and 18th days of the sixth moon. Within three days, more than one hundred thousand men were slaughtered, comprising those fellows who called themselves Princes, Field Marshals and Heavenly Generals, as well as a miscellaneous collection of high and low officials to the number of more than three thousand. (To sum up all) not a single individual escaped.

This was indeed a special Dispensation in Our favour, for which we are grateful to Heaven and Our Sacred Ancestors. The Empresses Dowager are unanimous in their feelings of gratitude for the peace and order which have been granted to us. They knew how to choose fit persons (to whom to entrust this great undertaking), so that every where there was the greatest unanimity, and both civil and military officials girded themselves for the task set before them, which has now been fully accomplished. Our Imperial Father, now enthroned in Heaven, will congratulate himself on the turn affairs have taken, while the inhabitants of the world, from the highest to the lowest, will be grateful. We acknowledge that virtue lies not in ourselves, how then could We bring about these successes? We look back on the deceased Emperor, who never desisted from the pursuit of that purpose of his (the extermination of the rebels). It continually grieves Us to think that He did not survive to see his designs carried out. Since this rebel Hung first created confusion in Kuang-si, fifteen years have elapsed, and since he settled himself in Nanking twelve years have dragged slowly on. The Insurgents have sampled more than ten provinces under foot, and overthrown several hundred cities, which have gradually been won back. Now, however, that the originator of all this mischief has met his fate, those great warriors who during the pacification of the country were exposed to every blast of heaven, and were drenched with rain, tasting every danger and difficulty, are indeed entitled to most unmistakeable marks of Our favour and gratitude. The Imperial Commissioner, Vice Prime Minister and Governor General of the two Kiang, Tsêng Kuo-fan, ever since the fourth year of Hsien Fêng has been actively engaged in the province of Hunan, raising militia and organising naval and military forces. Thus from time to time has he heaped up noble deeds, guarding the cities to the south of the Hsiang River, recovering Wu-chang-fu and Han-yang, and sweeping away the rebel hordes which infested the rivers. When the Eastern provinces were in a state of revolt, he, issuing from Su and Sung, recovered Chien-shan and Tai-hu, taking up a position at Chi mên, and thence from time to time making successful descents on the cities of Anhuei. An-king, the capital of Anhuei, was recovered, and a base of operations at once obtained. Competent civil and military officers—were sent to different places, thus bringing about those extraordinary successes by which We are now so much the gainers, namely, the destruction of the chiefs of the rebellion. The strategic ability and administrative talent of this high official are beyond all praise. He knew how to choose his men, picking out those who were fit for posts of importance. To him is due the highest honor, and he is accordingly made Senior Guardian of the Heir Apparent, and a hereditary Marquis of the first grade. He is also ornamented with a double-eyed peacock's feather. The deserts of Tsêng Kuo-tsuch, the Futai of Chekiang, who was formerly a Hsiu-tsai, but took up a military command, and carried out the designs of Tsêng Kuo-fan in the overthrow of very many Rebel strongholds, are also very great. In the eleventh year of Hsien Fêng he organised a force in the Hsiang district, and re-captured Anking. In the first and second years of Our reign he seized Chao-hsien, Han-chang hsien and Hu-chêou. He also led a naval and military force to Nanking, and took up his station on the Yu-hua tai hill (to the South of Nanking), and thence harrassed the rebel garrison. His camp was surrounded for some months by the Rebels, but by cleverness and resolution he broke through their lines. In the second month of this year he seized a most difficult position on the Chung hill, which had been fortified with stone works, thus complicating the investment of the city, and clearing the way for our operations. He dug mines, and when missiles were hurled from the walls he was ever in the midst of the heaviest fire. For half a month his men were continually in action. When the city was at last conquered and the Rebel leaders were slain, he was most assiduous and faithful in looking after the public interests. He is therefore nominated a Junior Guardian of the Heir Apparent, and an Earl of the first grade. He is also ornamented with the two-eyed peacock's feather. The Tu tu Li Chên-tien opened mines under a heavy fire from the enemy, and was most enthusiastic in his plans for the extinction of the Rebels. He was the first on the breach, and after him the assaulting party rushed in a body. Thus he it was who contributed success. In talent of every description he excelled other men, and he is therefore made a Viscount of the first grade, is granted the Yellow Jacket, and the short-peacock's feather. Hsiao Fu-szu, who distinguished himself by throwing up the battery which We have mentioned above, was the first to enter the gate and seize Li Hsiu-chên and Hung Jên-ta. His reward should also be very great. He is therefore created a Baron of the first grade, and is ornamented with the double eyed peacock's feather.

Here follows a list of Mandarins to whom various rewards—military rank, yellow jackets, button, increases rank, posthumous honours, &c., are granted.

As to those two criminals Li Hsiu-chên and Hung Jên-ta, Tsêng Kuo-fan is directed to seek out most reliable officers to whom they are to be entrusted for conveyance to Peking, where they will be carefully tried, and compelled to expiate their crimes. Hung Hsiu-tsuan's corpse is to be exhumed, his flesh torn from his bones, his head cut off, and hung up, after having been sent round to the scenes of his villany as a warning to others. Thus the grief and anxiety of the people will be alleviated. Other matters are left to the arrangement (of the Boards).

(August 3rd, 1864.)

FOR more than ten years the (Taiping) Rebels have disturbed the country, and many generals have been wearied in the attempt to exterminate the marauders, while others have been killed by overwork and in action. All these were most enthusiastic. Very many distinguished themselves in the highest degree, and died in the service of their country. Now that Nanking has been retaken, and the leaders of the Rebel movement destroyed, the spirits of these deceased warriors are still with us, although their bodies be out of sight. We at a distance from them, regarding their loyalty, mourn their untimely fate. Honor must be heaped on them after death to mark our approval of their deeds in this life. We therefore command E Ching Wang with the other high officials to examine carefully into the records of those deserving officers who have died, and to prepare a report to be submitted to us, awaiting Our pleasure.

Respect this.

THE report of the capture of Nanking having been received, boundless gratification was caused by the tidings. We looked back on the time when in the plenitude of their power the Rebels seized city after city, and, considering the aid afforded to our Imperial troops, we sincerely thanked the Spirits for their interference. By the aid thus afforded success crowned Our arms, the Rebels were arrested in their progress, and the work (of extermination) was ultimately completed. It is therefore most needful that thanks be offered to the gods for their assistance. Wherefore the Boards of Rites is directed to examine into the services rendered by the different gods, and to report to us.

THE LAND RENTERS MEETING.

To the Editor of the NORTH-CHINA HERALD.

SIR,—The remarks in the North-China Herald of 20th and 27th ultos. on municipal affairs, and the comments you offer on the conduct of the gentlemen who have successfully resisted the late attempts at unauthorised taxation on the part of the Municipal Council, appear to me so unjust that I cannot refrain from claiming space in your columns, that so one-sided a view of the question may not alone be presented to those at a distance who cannot follow the working of our municipal institutions. I can perhaps ask this with a bolder grace, seeing that you have construed, (as I contend most unjustly,) the reason I offered at the last meeting of Land Renters into an unnecessary and factious opposition to the Municipal Council. It is no doubt true that the Land Renters are at all times under considerable obligation to those gentlemen who compose the Municipal Council, and who give up their time gratuitously for the public good, but I imagine no member of that Council desires to suppress criticism or to limit the investigation of public affairs on the part of any Land Renter who may dissent from the views of the Council on any particular point; to do so would be contrary to those principles of free government which many of us have ever been accustomed to. I think no one will deny that the Municipal Council derives its power from the Land Renters, is amenable to them, and is not justified in imposing taxes, remitting those already in existence, or carrying through any measure of primary importance, except under their direct authority, first obtained at a public meeting at which not less than one third of said Land Renters shall be represented. If this be so, it will not be difficult to shew that the Council have, during the past six months, greatly exceeded their legitimate powers, and that the gentlemen who acted through Mr. Myburgh, in serving a notice on each of the members of the Council, have been of very great service in forcibly calling their attention to this fact, checking further unauthorised proceedings, and inducing the production of a sensible and moderate budget that was agreed to at the last meeting without a single dissentient vote. And now, I will endeavour to shew some of the points on which the Council have exceeded their legitimate functions, placing them under separate headings.

Taxation of Houses of Public Entertainment. On the 30th November last an abstract resolution was passed that it was advisable to tax these establishments, with a view, as expressed by Mr. Dent, of checking vice that it was impossible to eradicate; no scheme was proposed or any rates mentioned, that being reserved for the meeting of the 16th April, when, the accounting budget of the council was produced, shewing a sum of Tls. 265,972 to be raised from this source. Notwithstanding that this budget was then rejected by a vote of the Land Renters, and H.B.M. Consul explained that these taxes could not be raised without the consent of the Chinese authorities, it appears that the council, in July last, proceeded to attempt the enforcement of them, ignoring in toto their rejection by the Land Renters, and without obtaining the consent of the Chinese authorities to the specific plan they proposed. It is to be wondered at that, in thus committing such a glaring excess of their recognised powers, the members of the Council suddenly found themselves confronted by those whose interests were materially damaged by their unauthorised proceedings? The matter is now set at rest, the Land Renters have agreed to a small definite tax estimated by the Council to realise less than one thirdeth of the sum originally proposed, and the only thing to regret is that the Council have not yet seen the propriety of returning some Tls. 3,000 which they succeeded in obtaining by these illegal taxes.

Abandonment of the 8 per cent Tax on Chinese house-holders. In your remarks on the meeting of 18th August, you state that I made "an abortive attempt to convict the Council of "having exceeded their authority, at some previous period, by abolishing an 8 per cent tax "on rentals which the estimates shewed still "existed." Whether the attempt was abortive or not at the meeting, it is a fact that the Council did, about the 6th of July last, distribute a notification in Chinese stating that they would at once commence the collection of the new taxes on houses of entertainment, and abandon the 8 per cent tax they had hitherto levied on the ordinary native house-holder; the Taoutai's tax of 8 per cent being still collected for his benefit only. Now, I challenge the Council to produce any authority from the Land Renters sanctioning the abandonment of this tax, which has been in existence for the past eight years, and thus allowing all the shopkeepers and other respectable householders in the settlement, to escape municipal taxation altogether. The following paragraph, occurring in the municipal report of 16th April last, is the only notice ever given to the Land Renters that these taxes on Chinese, amounting to Tls. 90,000, were to be abandoned.

"In the estimate for the ensuing year, the Chinese "house tax has been lowered to the old rate of 8 per "cent which it is proposed shall be handed over wholly "to H. E. the Taoutai."

The Budget was quashed, the estimates not passed, and no resolution agreed to by the Land Renters supporting of the relinquishment of this tax. But the Council found early in July that, being backed up neither by H.B.M. Consul, the Taoutai or the Land Renters, the power of the police, though roughly applied, was insufficient to force the Chinese to pay these unauthorised taxes on houses of entertainment. It must have been with no little sense of relief, therefore, that they received the letter from H.B.M. Consul dated 15th August, informing them, that in consequence of the taking of Nanking, H. E. the Taoutai had decided to give up his 8 per cent tax and that they were at liberty to appropriate it from the commencement of the present quarter; but for this most fortunate relinquishment, it is sufficiently evident that the Council must have cancelled their notification issued in the previous month and again resumed their own 8 per cent tax, or appealed to the Land Renters for some new powers of raising the wind.

New Cemetery.—Here again the Council have exceeded their powers, by fixing on a site three miles and a half distant from the Settlement without first consulting the public. The new Cemetery Committee have at once decided to abandon so inconvenient a location, but it remains for us to learn how much money has already been wasted in preparing the place, making paths, &c. Now, seeing that the Council have, during the past six months, shewn such a remarkable disposition to proceed in opposition given them by the Land Renters, and have presented a budget that every one now condemns, the estimate being rather over double what is required for the good government of the settlement, it certainly would have been more satisfactory had they shown greater proclivity in the art of governing, before asking the Land Renters to grant them increased powers by a charter of incorporation, for it cannot be said that greater difficulty is experienced in collecting taxes here than in places where stringent laws exist for their enforcement. However, I for one am willing to accept the late budget as evidence that a better order of things is about to be initiated, and to hope that ere long our finances may be managed with such economy that, instead of alarming estimates, shewing an immense expenditure and debts with the Banks, contracted without authority, we may be able to emulate the French in shewing a clean balance sheet, reduced taxation, a magnificent town hall erected and paid for, and a bund extended to low water mark, * thus ridding our best promenade of the pestilential odours that at present arise from the mud flat in front of it.

Apologizing for occupying so much of your valuable space,

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

T. HANBURY.

Shanghai, 1st Sept., 1864.

* The contract for this improvement on the French concession is I am told already made.

THE CEMETERY COMMITTEE.

Minutes of a Meeting of the Cemetery Committee.

Present—Messrs. Forbes, Loureiro, Probst, Coghill, Morel and Thorne.

A letter was read from the Secretary of the Municipal Council, forwarding a copy of the resolution passed on the 18th inst., and placing the Council room at the disposal of the committee for their preliminary meeting.

On the motion of Dr. Coghill, seconded by Mr. Loureiro, Mr. Forbes was unanimously elected Chairman.

The Chairman stated that the Municipal Council had nominated Mr. Joseph Thorne a member of the Committee in the place of Mr. Call, the latter gentleman having expressed his regret at being unable to serve; the arrangement, necessarily, being subject to confirmation by the Land Renters.

The following resolutions were then unanimously agreed to:—

1st.—That the Committee definitively abandon the idea of establishing the new Cemetery on the site originally selected by the Municipal Council.

2nd.—That tenders be duly invited, through the medium of the local papers, (foreign and Chinese) for the sale of land, containing an area of about 50 mow, in the vicinity of the foreign settlements.

3rd.—That Messrs. Thorne, Probst and Coghill be appointed a sub-committee, to draw up a prospectus presenting to the community a scheme for the establishment of a new cemetery, and to report as to the most available method of raising the necessary funds.

THE "BERWICK WALLS" HOSPITAL.

Enquiry into the circumstances attending the disappearance from the Hospital Ship "Berwick Walls" of JOHN BARKER, supposed to have been drowned during the night of 22nd August, 1864.

Made under the instructions of H.B.M. Consul at Shanghai by C. Treasure Jones, acting as one of H. M.'s Vice Consuls, at Shanghai, on board the Berwick Walls this 26th day of August, 1864.

Dr. J. D. M. COGHILL states:—The man John Barker came on board early in the morning of the 22nd instant. I saw him about 9. He was suffering from dysentery and in a very low state, but quite sensible and answered all my enquiries sensibly. I saw him again in the evening before dinner about 6 P.M. Dr. John Coghill saw him in the interval. He was much in the same way, no signs of amendment. There were no signs of any aberration of intellect. He answered any question I put him at once. Was feeling no medicine likely to cause him to become light headed. If he became so it must have been from weakness. About 4 A.M. it was reported he was missing. From the fact of his window being unshipped, I presumed he must have gone out of that. There was no splash or scream heard, though many people were awake at the time. There is a Chinese attendant always awake in the ward. Coolies take their turns at this duty. There is no European watch kept in the night, unless there is any one particularly bad and then some one is set to look after him. We formerly had rails across the parts of the separate cabins but a junk scraped them off. There were some in the general ward. The body has not been discovered since. The coolie in charge administers medicine when required by the patients in the night.

CHARLES WILSON, Steward of Berwick Walls, states:—I saw J. Barker as late as half past 9. He was sensible enough and did not appear to be wandering at all. He asked me if I had been to Mr. Keele with a note, and if I had got an answer. He seemed low in spirits and said I might have a book he had, for he thought he would not want it any more. I go round about half past 9, and see the patients are all right, and then see the coolie in there, but if any one is very bad, I stay there all night and lie down anywhere. Mr. Albray and our carpenter came to me at day-break and asked if I had seen Barker. I said no, and they then said they thought he must have gone, as they had examined his cabin. When I last saw it the window was in and the upper part down, but Albray tells me it was shut up by him entirely at 2 o'clock. When I saw it in the morning the window was unshipped and standing edge up against the side of the ship, leaving the whole port open. Since that time I have not seen or heard anything of J. Barker. I sleep above in a little cabin, not on the same deck as the patients, but the coolie is to call me if wanted for anything.

MR. O.R. KEELE states:—John Barker was formerly in the 31st Regt. He was servant to Lieut. James of that Regt. and afterwards with the late J. P. Dore, Esq. He was a groom, and on Mr. Dore's murder I engaged him as foreman. Dr. Sibbald wrote to me and asked me to give him a trip to Japan or the north, as he was suffering from dysentery. I received his note on Sunday and the first thing on Monday morning, Barker told me he had not been able to sleep all night, and asked permission to go on board the Berwick Walls. Thinking he would be more comfortable and better attended to, I let him go until I could get a passage north for him. He went on board on Monday morning, and in the evening I received a note from him asking me to become security for him. The next morning I wrote to Dr. Barclay offering to become security for him, and when the settlement made arrangements for a passage for him by a vessel going to Tientsin. On my return home about 2 P.M., the boy who had taken my chit to Dr. Barclay told me that Barker was dead. I could not understand this, and wrote to Dr. Barclay and received the information from him in the note I handed the Vice Consul yesterday. As far as the man's character went, he was a particularly quiet and respectable man and a very valuable servant to me. He had never shown the least sign of weakness of intellect, and for his position was in very good circumstances. I have property amounting to $600 or $700 of his in hand.

WILLIAM ALBRAY, duly sworn, states:—I was on the night of the 22nd a patient in the Berwick Walls, and so was John Barker, who was a friend of mine. When he first came on board, he sat by my bed while his room was preparing, and spoke quite rationally. In the early part of the evening he told me he wanted his will made, and asked me to come and read prayers to him. I did so and he made me read them over a second time. The steward gave him some medicine. I told the steward he was a little light in his head. I don't remember what he said in reply. About 11 he came and pulled my hair and said he had been looking for me. I went to his cabin and stopped with him till 2. The last hour he seemed to get quite delirious, and said he saw visions and people were coming for him. I closed his port early in the evening. At 2 he said "You go and get some sleep, I am go to sleep now." I then went. He said, "Be sure to come at 4 and give me my medicine." At 4 o'clock I went to see him and missed him. I searched round the decks for him, and then went back to his room and when I found his window was unshipped, I at once suspected he had gone out, and I gave notice to the steward. I am in Mr. Hogg's employ and live at his farm. When Barker was lost, the ebb tide was running. I have never seen or heard of him since. He first proposed to me to make his will, and when I wanted to do so he said "No, read prayers first and make the will to-morrow." I read the prayers several times, and he was very attentive, and said "Don't read too fast, read steady so that I can understand." He told me that the man who was Mr. Dore's Compradore had Tls. 500 of his.

Sworn before me this 26th day of August, 1864,

Acting Vice-Consul.

The foregoing deposition was taken by me on oath, as the deponent William Albray is very ill from dysentery and his recovery to health doubtful.

THE LOSS OF THE "SOOCHOW."

WE are enabled to lay before our readers the following full particulars regarding the wreck of the steamer Soochow. It appears from the Captain's statement that she left the harbour of Hongkong at 4.30 P.M. on the night of August under steam, with a strong wind from the South South West and heavy rain, and proceeded on her voyage. That on the eleventh of August they had a fresh gale from the North North East with thick weather and a high head sea, the vessel making but little way; and finding it impossible to progress against the strong head gale and high sea, they hove away at 11.30 for the land, intending to anchor until the force of the gale should abate; At noon they had the same strong gale and heavy head sea and with thick weather; and at 3 P.M. they anchored on the outside of Owick Bay with 30 fathoms of chain on the starboard lower anchor, Chawn Point bearing North West by West, Owick Point rock bearing East by North. They then sent down the yards; and at 8 P.M. it became more moderate, but the weather still thick with drizzling rain; that they sounded and found seven and a half fathoms water; that Friday the twelfth of August commenced with a strong and increasing wind from the North with thick weather; that at 6.0 A.M. the wind had increased to a hard gale with violent squalls of wind and rain; that at 7.45 they let go the port anchor and veered out cable to forty-five fathoms on the starboard anchor and shackled it down on the port anchor and swung in the quarter boats; that the barometer was falling rapidly and the weather very thick; that they put slip ropes and buoys on both chains ready in case the wind should veer; that at 10 A.M. the gale was still increasing and the barometer still falling; that at noon it blew with terrific violence, the barometer still falling; that the wind suddenly lulled, but shortly after it came on again from the South West and blew with still greater violence; that they paid out seventy five fathoms on the port anchor and the whole of the chain on the starboard anchor, and steamed ahead at full speed; that it was still blowing with terrific violence, and at about 1.30 P.M. the starboard chain parted just before the windlass and the vessel drifted on to the shore, the port anchor also giving way; that at 3.0 P.M. the stern post and propeller were knocked away, the ship striking heavily and driving upon the beach; that they sent a boat on shore for the purpose of forwarding letters to Swatow and Amoy for assistance, but they could not induce the Chinese to take them; that they then made every preparation against an attack and set a strict watch; that Saturday the thirteenth of August commenced with a fresh gale, the vessel still ashore on the beach and striking hard; that at 8.30 A.M. they observed a steamer passing to the Westward; that they fired guns and made signals of distress, whereupon the steamer bore down to their assistance and proved to be the screw steamship Chautleuer bound to Hongkong; that for the preservation and safety of the cargo laden on board the Soochow, they, with the assistance of the boats and crew of the Chautleuer, transhipped to that vessel such portions of the cargo as they were able to save from the wreck, during which operation one of the Soochow's boats was swamped and lost; At 5 P.M. the Soochow being well up on the beach and striking hard, and finding it impossible to get her off in her then crippled state, her stern post being knocked away and her propeller broken, and several Chinese boats having made their appearance filled with Chinese, and the Chinese on shore having congregated in large numbers close to the wreck, the Chautleuer being unable to remain any longer by the vessel, and it not being safe for them to remain any longer by the ship, they abandoned her and proceeded on to Swatow, where they arrived on Sunday the fourteenth of August.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GABRIEL.

PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE HUMAN TEETH.

By Messrs. Gabriel, London, Liverpool, &c.

IN some thirty pages Messrs. Gabriel, the well-known dentists, discuss the whole subject of the teeth and their proper treatment, for the purpose of preservation. The subject is treated philosophically and practically in all its phases, and with the information is combined much seasonable advice as to the preservation of these important ornaments of the face. The authors have had a large experience in this branch of business, and they are able to give good reasons for the modes and processes which they recommend in these pages. The functions of the true dentist are of great value in the present age, and the bulk of men and women find that it is safest and best to place themselves, in this department of surgery, in the hands of the properly qualified adviser. Extract from "Salford Weekly News," January 4th, 1864.—As may be seen by reference to our advertising columns, Messrs. Gabriel supply Artificial Teeth and Gums on their patented system, irrespective of distance or climate.
